

HOLDALL & CO

HANDMADE IN ENGLAND

1. The quick and durable U-Bar fitting, for easy single-handed opening and closing.
2. Rolled and padded handles for comfort, easily flattened for carrying underarm.
3. Hand-stained and burnished edges for a truly luxury finish.
4. On the back: our unique newspaper and umbrella loop; helping to keep you organised.
5. Hand lock-stitched ends and corners for extra strength on stress points.
6. Every piece is cut from the very highest quality full-grain bridle leather, vegetable tanned for a long-lasting and durable finish.
7. Detachable and adjustable shoulder straps to suit your style and needs.

Our Story

We're a British based designer and manufacturer of luxury leather accessories. Our products are made using traditional techniques from the highest quality full grain leather; our craftsmen are some of the last remaining luggage and case makers left in Britain.

Embodied in the simple words "Made in England" each product is a statement, that of quality, of heritage and of respect; respect for the skills and workmanship that goes into making a quality product.

Inspired by the sentimental objects passed down generation to generation, our collection reflects the quality and luxury of times gone by; with the durability, longevity and clever designs expected for modern lifestyles, all for an affordable price and without compromise in quality.

In addition to our signature Folios, the collection now includes Slimline and Twin Compartment Briefcases, Wallets and Card Cases.

Design

We believe great products start with great design; Holdall & Co accessories begin life in our design studio in Oundle, Northamptonshire.

Inspired by the sentimental objects passed down generation to generation, our growing collection reflects the quality and luxury of times gone by; with the durability, longevity and clever designs expected for modern lifestyles.

Not only do we want our products to look great, but we believe that it's vital for our products to be functional too. We design every product with customer use and needs in mind, designing them to withstand the rigours of regular use and to weather the storms of life in style.

Craftsmanship

Proudly bearing the mark 'Handmade in England', every piece we make is constructed with pride and perfection to exacting standards that English luggage makers are renowned for, making each item unique.

We design our products to be functional and to look great, and our crafts people make them durable and long lasting. From our hand-cut 16" Briefcase and its heeled corners, to our hand-burnished Wallets with hand-stitched reinforcement; every piece is skilfully crafted with British-made tools, using traditional techniques.

Our crafts people and their decades of experience, are what make Holdall & Co special.

Leather

We always source the very best materials we can, and we believe strongly in supporting other small businesses; all of our manufacturers, suppliers and merchants are British-based and most are even local to us.

We proudly use only the finest vegetable-dyed full-grain bridle leather available in England, supplied by experienced leather merchants based locally to us in Northamptonshire.

Full-grain leather is the strongest and most durable type of leather; over the life of the product the leather will mature through interaction with its surroundings and will improve in appearance, acquiring a natural vintage patina unique to it's owner.

Colours and finishes are carefully selected in-house to compliment our designs. We have recently introduced a range of new colours to add a sharp new take on our timeless collection.

Full-Grain Leather

What we exclusively use; this is the very highest quality. Hides have not been sanded, buffed or snuffed, leaving the full grain intact to ensure maximum fibre strength and durability.

The natural texture, marks and imperfections remain on the surface of the hide; rather than wearing out, it will develop a patina over time.

Full-grain leather can be thinned down by 'splitting' away the underside of the leather. This removes only the weakest part of the hide.

Top-Grain Leather

Most commonly used in designer leather products, this is the second-highest quality. It has had the underside 'split' away, making it thinner and more pliable than full-grain.

The surface is sanded and a finish coat added, which results in a colder, plastic feel with less breathability; as a result it will not develop a natural patina.

Corrected-Grain Leather

This is any leather that has had an artificial grain applied to its surface. The hides used to create corrected leather do not meet the standards for use in creating vegetable or chemically dyed leather.

The imperfections are corrected or sanded off, an artificial grain impressed into the surface, and finally dressed with stain or dyes.

Split Leather

The fibrous leftover from splitting top-grain leather, this remaining 'split' is further separated into a middle and a flesh layer.

The split layers have an artificial layer applied to the surface and are typically embossed with a leather grain.

Splits are also used to create suede - the strongest of which being from either the flesh layer or from full-grain hides sanded down.
